TENTH YEAR.

HAZEL GREEN, WOLFE COUNTY, KY., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1894.

NUMBER 24.

OUR FAIR

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

THE LARGEST ATTENDANCE IN ITS HISTORY.

MORE HORSES, MORE RACING, MORE INTEREST MANIFESTED.

EVERYTHING PASSED OFF QUIETLY.

Below will be found a partial list of visitors to the Fair each day, as taken from our daily, and such other occurrences as presented themselves to the eagle eyes of our reportorial corps. The list of premiums as awarded by the Association will be published next week.

From Wednesday's Daily.

Joe Staten, of Mt. Sterling, is up for the Fair.

Robert McLin left yesterday for his home in Winchester.

Miss Nancy Ford, who is teaching in Lee county, is at home for a week's visit.

Deek Hicks, of Harrison county, arrived yesterday and will take in the Fair.

Miss Rosa Trimble is not so well today. Her mother, Mrs. W. P. Trimble is better.

Hon. Jo M. Kendall addressed the Confederate Association at Frenchburg Friday.

W. H. DeBusk, who is teaching this year in Lee county, is at home for a week's visit.

Miss Emma Slinip who has been quite ill at W. T. Caskey's has recovered sufficiently to be about.

Medley Oliver, of Mt. Sterling, arrived Sunday. He is a nephew of Mrs. Dr. Kash whom he is visiting.

Dr. Thomas, who was summoned to the bedside of F. McGuire Sunday, left yesterday for his home at Ezel.

R. N. Rose, who is engaged in the lumber business at Elkatawa, is at home for a week and will be home in the Fair.

Mrs. Jas. Hargis, little son and daughter, of Jackson, are at the Day House. They will remain over the week.

J. B. Davis returned last night from Welch, West Virginia, where he has been engaged in the stone masonry business.

Mrs. Eliza Swango, wife of Register G. B. Swango, arrived Friday from Frankfort and will remain until after the Fair.

Dr. M. C. Kash, of Farmers, is visiting at his old home on Gillmore. Mack's Hatchet was an effective weapon in days gone by.

Harry Gamble, of Blaine, Lawrence county, Kentucky, an ex Representative, of the Legislature, has three horses to exhibit at the Fair.

This is a gala week for Hazel Green, and we hope every visitor will be pleased with the Fair and the town and come again next year.

Ed. French and Eugene Adkinson, of Stanton, and John Adams, of Magoffin county, are here to enter Hazel Green Academy next Monday.

Judge G. B. Swango is in attendance at the annual reunion of the Confederate veteran's association at Russellville. He will probably arrive for the two last days of the Fair.

Miss Myrtle Maxey, of West Liberty, and Lizzie Cox, of Mt. Sterling, two highly accomplished and beautiful young ladies are visiting the family of Hon. J. E. Quick.

The Fair, the Fair—of course you will go to the Fair.

To see all the races.

The patchwork and lace.

And all the pretty faces that's there.

W. L. May, of Magoffin, has a fine string of horses at his stables. If we had a few such men in our country, the horse would soon be a paying product instead of the drag that he now is on our markets.

W. W. McGuire, the attorney for the Broad Railroad Company, paid our office a pleasant call Monday, and from his visit we judge that everybody will be here from West Liberty to take in the Fair.

Miss Mina Hon, of Bowen, Powell county, will teach a class in drawing here during the fall if she can secure enough scholars to justify her. She attended the school at Cincinnati two years, and is said to be proficient in her art.

Mrs. Cord and Robert arrived here Friday from Owenton. Mrs. Cord brought along a colored man and woman to do the cooking for The Home during the coming term, and the students will have good rating without attending the annual meeting.

All honor to President Pieratt and his worthy lieutenants. Nothing has been left undone to make the Fair a success; and if every body don't have a good time, the fault lies within themselves, notwithstanding the cold water flings of a few disgruntled growlers and sore heads.

President Pieratt met with a very painful accident late yesterday afternoon while riding through J. T. Day's livery stable a horse kicked him on the right leg inflicting an ugly wound. Late last night he was still suffering, but this morning he is on hands. Neither broken bones nor kicks of any kind can daunt a man of his nerve.

We notice that Hon. John P. Salter and others have eaten up a patch of water melons for E. B. Perry, of Morgan county. We knew John P. liked water without the melon attachment, but are proud to know that he can also give some attention to the lucious melon. He once upon a time said that the editor of this paper had the best well of water in the world, and it is an open question whether he likes our water or Mr. Perry's melons the better.

From Wednesday's Daily.

Mrs. M. Tyler is very low with fever.

J. H. Little, of Campton, is on hands at the Fair.

Dr. T. S. Pryse, of Beattyville, is over for the Fair.

Mrs. Sallie Gwin and son, of Jackson, are expected here today to take in the Fair.

James T. Bash, of Mt. Sterling, is up for a week's visit and will take in the Fair.

Joe Horton and Brack Johnson, of Montgomery, are stopping with Mrs. F. N. Day.

Dude Smith, one of Louisville's enterprising drummers, is registered at the Day House.

M. F. Horton, of Campton, was in town yesterday.

F. R. Logan, of Lexington, registered at the Day House last night. He will remain for a week.

J. Green Trimble, of Mt. Sterling, arrived last night. He is with his daughter, Mrs. J. T. Day.

Circuit Court Clerk J. F. Vansant, of Campton, came over last night to take in the Fair.

Willie Spurlock and Rowland Minix, of Salyersville, are enjoying the sights and talking to the girls.

Miss Lettie Roberts, of Campton, is among our beautiful and ladylike visitors. She is at the Day House.

Elder J. T. Pieratt will preach at the Laurel school house in this county next Sunday at 10 a. m. and 8 p. m.

J. T. Gevedon and his better-half, of West Liberty, accompanied by their little daughter, are sight seeing at the Fair.

Joe Arnett, of Salyersville, is seeing the sights and taking in the Fair. He has the fastest horse that was ever on our track.

The Hatcher Creek base ball club, of Powell county, defeated the Clay City nine Saturday, September 1st. Score 24 to 6.

Judge Taulbee tried twenty three cases at Campton yesterday, and took in the races too. That is somewhat of a record, isn't it?

R. C. Thompson, who has been away on business for two months in Braxhill, Knott and Perry counties, is expected home today.

Misses Lena Betty, Pattie Mahan and Mrs. Blakey, of Beattyville, are visiting Mrs. F. McGuire. They will remain over the week.

W. C. Shanklin, of Mt. Sterling, who has been a frequent visitor of Hazel Green died Monday of consumption. He was buried by the Masonic order.

Miss Anna Belle Combs, of Campton, is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. F. Pieratt. She will probably be listed soon among the boarders at the Academy Home.

Ralph Zevy, representing the Merchants Job Lot House, Cincinnati, is still at the Day House, and will be pleased to show his line of clothing to the merchants.

The many friends of Miss Sabina Taulbee, who is sick at her grandfather's, will be glad to learn that she is much better and in a fair way to an early recovery.

George Lyle, Jr., and wife and children, and Miss Lillie Newkirk, all of Estill county, are the guests of Mrs. Annie Kash. They will remain during the Fair.

Sam A. Brown, Democratic candidate for sheriff of Magoffin county, was at the Fair grounds yesterday. He expects to roll up a good majority in November. Success to him.

Taylor Centis, Democratic candidate for County Judge, said to Judge Carson, the Republican candidate, "How are you, ex-Judge? Let me introduce you to the next Judge."

The union meeting given out to be held at Ezel has been changed to Isaac Murphy's school house on Grassy, Monday, the date, 8th Sunday in September. All ministers of the Gospel and all others are cordially invited.

The Misses Hattie Cole and Minnie Downing, and John Downing, of West Liberty, arrived for the Fair yesterday. The two former are characters in the West Liberty Dramatic club to exhibit at this place tomorrow night.

One of the most prominent horsemen in Morgan county was heard to say that unless the racing was carried on on honorable principles, he would cease to patronize the Fair and withdraw his horses.

James Hanks, of Campton, boys, in and out of the Fair.

President H. F. Pieratt was at his post of duty yesterday despite his lameness. Nothing has equaled his nerve since Old Jackson rode before his soldiers with a shattered arm and threatened to shoot the first man who refused to obey orders. Verily, the age of iron wills has not passed.

Secretary Kash says that there was more fine stock entered yesterday than on any other corresponding day in the history of the Association. That one statement is sufficient to knock out all the soreheads in and about Hazel Green, who have tried to discourage this highly commendable enterprise.

The Herald takes pleasure in referring to all those seeking legal advice to our young friend Rollin A. Kash, Police Judge of Hazel Green and Secretary of the Fair Association, who will take the cases Monday evening, and on Tuesday. His law office is over H. F. Pieratt's & Co's store. Give him a call.

"How'll you swap horses," said a white gent about three sheets in the wind to a colored brother. "I'll give you $10.00 the black man. 'I'll give you $10.00." "Well, boss, I've purty hard up, and bein' as it is, you'll take $7.50." "Why, you damned fool, I offered you $10.00." "Well, boss, I splits the difference wid you." "Go to h—, you black son of a gun, and off they rode."

J. H. Stamper, of Lexington, was a visitor at the Fair on Tuesday, and was conspicuous by the presence of a Breckinridge button. Deputy Marshall Byrd also wore a button-hole badge representing the silver-haired and silver-tongued statesman. These little tokens show how the winds blow in the Seventh.

The following letter, received yesterday, explains itself.

GUS STRAUS, Ky., Sept. 1, 1894.

MR. SPENCER COOPER, Hazel Green, Ky.—My Dear Friend:—I acknowledge the receipt of complimentary ticket to be present. Please accept my thanks.

With my kindest regards,

Yours truly,

GUS STRAUS.

The Will More Cornet Band was organized last January under the management of N. P. Wanaack and C. C. Maxey with fourteen pieces, twelve of which they have yet. Its success has cost them a great deal of time, to say nothing of the expense which amounts to something over $800. This is quite a luxury for our sister city, and we congratulate the directors of the Fair on securing their services.

Some several years ago there was a minister who owned a saw mill, and was camping in a tent. However, he and one of his employees, who was rather a profane fellow, were talking on scripture one morning while at breakfast. The employee began to tell something the Lord had said unto Moses. At that instant a rat ran across the floor, and he, pointing at the rat, said, "The Lord said unto Moses, Hell, what a rat!"

From Thursday's Daily.

Will Roberts, of Campton, was in town yesterday.

W. C. May and wife, of White Oak, are attending the Fair.

Harry Cecil, of Grassy, was tiptoeing in town Wednesday.

Hon. J. C. Lykins, of Campton, accompanied by his two sons, Gus and Arthur, was visiting the Fair yesterday.

Kenith Guile, of Henderson, was at the Fair yesterday, and if you'll look good you will find him today.

Hon. J. Milt Hager, of Salyersville, is down for the Fair. He is a staunch Democrat upon whom there are no flies.

See the editor of The Herald and pay him your subscription. A little money now would be very acceptable.

Mrs. A. S. Henry and sister, Miss Scott, from Kansas, are registered at the Day House. They are enjoying the Fair.

Representative W. C. Taylor and wife, of Frenchburg, are visiting his brother-in-law, Prof. J. W. Taulbee and taking in the Fair.

W. O. Mize says he has not seen so many people since he was at the World's Fair. He says they outnumber the frogs of the Nile.

Charles Swango and Ollie Walcott, of Frankfort, are with M. E. James for the Fair. They are enjoying themselves immensely.

Sheriff Ben Carr, of Morgan, wife and daughter, attended the Fair Wednesday, and were much pleased with the entertainment.

The advertisement of T. F. Carr, the little jeweler of Ezel, will be found in this issue, and it will pay you to read it carefully.

Miss Stella Greer, of Grassy Creek, was taking in the sights at the Fair yesterday, with our jeweler, J. M. Havens of this place.

The saddle ring yesterday was a beauty. It has never been equalled in the history of the Association either in style or numbers.

Henry Combs, Circuit and County Clerk of Menefee, accompanied by his daughter, was attending the Fair Wednesday.

Henry Phillips, of Mt. Sterling, is at the Academy Home. After the Fair is over he will matriculate in the Academy for the year.

Jeff Phillips, of Morgan county, was a popular judge yesterday.

Grover Cleveland drinks milk shake, and so does THE HERALD.

County attorney-elect A. Howard Stamper was on the grounds yesterday.

Ex-sheriff Sam Dennis, of Ezel, was in town yesterday taking in the Fair.

Deputy Sheriff Sam Wheeler, of Morgan county, was at the Fair yesterday.

Dr. Lockhart's two-year-old is a picture. We will look for him next year.

Miss Rachel Nickell, of Ezel, was one of the beautiful girls at the Fair yesterday.

Jo Ellison, of Catlettsburg, is up for the Fair. He is registered at the Day House.

J. Pieratt, of Maytown, was up yesterday. He says the Fair is too good a thing to miss.

J. W. McCullagh, of Cincinnati, is registered at the Day House and is taking in the Fair.

Miss Mary Jane Swango, of Stanton, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. James Lacy, of this place.

Prof. J. W. Taulbee was a conspicuous figure at the Fair yesterday. He hails from Daysboro.

J. B. Hollon and wife were at the Fair yesterday. Mr. Hollon has exhibited some nice stock.

D. J. Lykins, of South Fork, was an enterprising rider that was present at the Fair yesterday.

J. C. Johnson and Jess Horton, of Hope, are taking in the Fair. They are with Mrs. F. N. Day.

Charles Wyatt and John Trimble, of Camargo, are stopping at Mrs. F. N. Day's and are taking in the Fair.

Messrs Stephenson and Wolf, of Virginia, are taking in the Fair. They are stopping at Swango Springs.

Berry Pieratt, of Ezel, is relishing the girls at the Fair in handsome style. He is a comely lad of sixteen summers.

The Wells' horse was well driven yesterday by Ray Moss, who made him a close second. Look out for him in the $300 race.

"Three balls and one baby." That's the way she goes, boys. The Fair just comes once a year and only lasts four days, so enjoy yourself.

Supt. A. E. Byrd, of Campton, is shaking hands with the amphitheatre. He is immensely popular and a tireless worker in the educational circle.

Stranger, is lonesome in a big crowd, isn't it? Had rather be in the wilderness than in a big crowd by my self, so far as loneliness is concerned.

Dr. J. F. Lockhart, dentist, is located in the rear of the brick building on the corner of Main and Broadway. Call on him and have your teeth examined.

That Virginia pistol that was pulled on Kentucky stock yesterday, was landed in the hand of the owner in short order. The citizen that pulled it went to prison.

Miss Rose Trimble, who has been quite ill for a long time still continues a patient Christian sufferer, and the warm weather and dust are very trying upon her.

Floyd Day, of Clay City, and a former citizen of our town, is up for the week. He was one of the prime movers of the Association, and has always contributed largely to its success.

The cow that took the blue ribbon on Tuesday was the property of Curtis Rose, of our town, and not of W. T. Swango, as erroneously reported in our issue of yesterday.

Jo Kendall is quite a versatile gentleman. Yesterday he slid over a counter at the Fair Grounds and sold lemonade and cider with as much avidity as an Italian pander vendor.

Misses Pryse, Flannery and Clayton, three of Beattyville's charming young ladies are with Mrs. W. T. Swango's. Miss Clayton has a tenor voice rarely excelled for sweetness and compass.

Watch these columns closely and spend your money with those who advertise. That is the way to encourage home enterprise, and if people would only make that a rule times would soon be better.

John Wilson get your gun, your sword and pistol and march those fellows to jail that have been throwing their hats in the air and swearing by the sun, moon and stars that they could not be arrested.

John F. Vansant, vice-president of the Fair Association, was on Wednesday summoned to the bedside of his brother, John Vansant, Clerk of the Elliott County Court, who has been quite ill, and he left once for Sandy Hook.

"D—n the dust," was an expression that came out of an hundred dry throats yesterday, and then President Pieratt stepped forth and said: "We will not have only d—n the dust, but we will drown it." Good boy. Now see that it is done.

THE HERALD

SPENCER COOPER, : : : Editor.

GREAT MEN AND BOYS.

Kents, it is said, was born in a lively stable.

Powers, the sculptor, spent his youth on a farm.

James Monroe spent his boyhood in the country.

John Calvin was an apprentice at the cooper's trade.

Turner, the painter, spent his boyhood in a barber shop.

Paganini began his career as a child laborer in a factory.

Edward Irving, the preacher, spent his youth in a tawny school.

Washington's boyhood and youth were passed in the country.

Rousseau's boyhood was spent in the home of a watchmaker.

Rutherford B. Hayes was a good scholar and a modest, kindly boy.

George Fox was brought up in the humble home of a weaver.

Schubert was educated for a school teacher, but preferred music.

Kant, the great German metaphysician, spent his youth in a saddler's shop.

James Buchanan was a studious, laborious boy, not bright, but diligent.

Moire, the French dramatist, began life as an apprentice to an upholsterer.

Claude Lorraine, the landscape painter, when a boy was an apprentice to a pastry cook.

Cardinal Mezzofanti, the phenomenal linguist, spent his boyhood in a carpenter's shop.

Lincoln's boyhood was spent in the roughest and coarsest description of farm work.

Verdi's youth was spent, as the son of a peasant, in the arduous duties of the farm.

Palestrina began life in the home of a cook, and was early trained to be a waiter.

Grant, when a boy, preferred work on the farm to helping his father in the tannery.

Benjamin Harrison was a close student, and had all the advantages of a liberal education.

James Mill was the son of a cobbler, and himself for a short time worked at the bench.

Tinsoretto, the painter, came honestly by his profession. He was brought up in a dye shop.

Diocletian, the Roman Emperor, was born in slavery and obtained his freedom by service in the army.

Luther's father was a miner, and the future reformer often earned a supper by singing in the streets.

Barry, the painter, had his interest in art roused when on voyages with his father, who was a sailor.

Daddridge, the theologian, was brought up in an oil shop, his father being a dealer in paints and oils.

Thomas Paine, the American political and controversial writer, passed his youth at the staymaker's bench.

Schumann was raised in a book store, and to the end of his life retained a fondness for the business.

Horne Tookie was fond of staying in his father's poultry shop, and liked to be intrusted with the business.

Arthur was a close student and excelled in scholarship. He was fond of athletic sports and hunting.

James Madison was very fond of his books, and at an early age acquired a high reputation for learning.

Alexander Pope, when a boy, spent much of his time in the counting room of his father, who was a merchant.

The Spanish sculptor, Alvarez, drifted naturally from stone cutting and polishing into executing works of art.

Zachary Taylor was brought up on a farm. He was very thrifty, and soon had a stock of property in calves.

Chaucer's boyhood was passed in a wine vault, where he was required to wash barrels and clean wine casks.

Liszt was driven to the piano every day. For over fifteen years he daily practiced covered ten to twelve hours.

Andrew Jackson was brought up in the country, having no education beyond what was afforded by a district school.

Lucian, the Latin poet, was brought up in the workshop of a sculptor, and was himself no mean artist in that line.

James K. Polk was born on a farm, and even when very young helped his father in the latter's work as a surveyor.

By his Puritan neighbors Bunyan was considered a wild youth, because he played at various games common in his time.

Wagner, the composer, spent no small share of his time when a boy in the police court, where his father was the clerk.

John Quincy Adams went to France with his father at the age of 11. He received the best education the times afforded.

David Livingstone, as a boy, showed all the determination which was afterwards so prominent a feature of his character.

Virgil's boyhood was spent in the house of a porter. His father was a burden carrier, who had bought his freedom.

Canova, the sculptor, came naturally by his profession, being the son of a stonecutter, and early apprenticed to that trade.

St. Cyr, Napoleon's great Marshal, was trained to carry a peddler's pack, but said it aside for a gun and rose from the ranks.

As a boy Thomas Jefferson was fond of hunting, athletic sports and music. He was a good shot and played well on the violin.

Napoleon's first plaything was a toy cannon. Late in life he said, "The whole course of my life was determined by that cannon."

Cowper was a melancholy child, and often would sit for many hours almost motionless, gazing at the landscape before him.

Garfield was a farm-bred boy, and even when very young aided his widowed mother by working at odd jobs for the neighbors.

Thorwaldsen, the sculptor, was first taught the carpenter's trade. From that he went to wood carving, and thence to sculpture.

Franklin Pierce was early sent to school and acquired a collegiate education. He had a marked taste for athletics and military tactics.

Jeremy Taylor, the divine, passed his early years in a barber shop. His business was to sweep out of a shop and wait on his father.

Hans Christian Anderson was brought up in his father's cobbler shop and heard from the old man the stories he afterwards wrote.

John Adams was born on a farm, and in accordance with a custom then very general, he, being the eldest son, was sent off to college.

Yandike, the painter, was intended by his father for a merchant, and much pains were taken to teach him book-keeping and accounts.

Sachs, the great German poet, scribbled rhymes when a boy. His father once chastised him for making out a customer's bill in poetry.

Soult, the soldier, spent his boyhood on a peasant farm, and entering the army as a private rose from the ranks to the grade of Field Marshal.

The boy Dickens had the experience described in "David Copperfield." The work was in many important particulars a record of his own life.

Mernt spent his boyhood in his father's inn, and his youth in a theological college. He was destined for the Church, but preferred the army.

The father of Scamler, the great church historian, was a carter, and in early boyhood the historian often aided his father to drive and load.

Pepys always had a weakness for the tailor's trade, from the fact that when a boy he used to gather the scraps of cloth that fell from his father's shears.

When a boy William Henry Harrison showed a strong taste for the study of medicine, but deserted it to enter the army for the Indian war of 1791.

Ascham, the educational writer, was the son of a servant. His first impulse toward education was given by an accidental sight of an educational treatise.

Millard Fillmore was born and raised on a farm. He said he never saw a copy of Shakespeare, a history of the United States or a map until he was 19 years old.

Sir Isaac Newton spent his boyhood on a farm, and there acquired the marvelous powers of observation that afterwards made him famous as a natural philosopher.

Oliver Cromwell was the son of a country gentleman, who was also a brewer, and the little boy was always interested in the operation of the brew house.

John Wesley always declared that he owed all his usefulness to his mother. She was one of the most remarkable women who ever lived. Her letters are classic.

Cowley, the English poet, spent his boyhood in a grocer's shop. He often waited on customers, who, in later years, reminded him of the fact, to his no small disgust.

Barrow, the theologian, was a singularly serious child. When he was disinclined to merriment it was impossible to make him laugh, such was his self-control.

Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's marshals, who afterwards became King of Sweden, was educated in the office of a country notary, and spent his time in copying legal papers.

West, the painter, showed his talent at a very early age. He made sketches in charcoal before he was 19, and some of his early work displays great ease in the use of the crayon.

Martin Van Buren began life as an office boy for a lawyer, rising slowly to the position of clerk, copyist and finally becoming a pleader in the courts of Justice of the Peace.

While in Chicago, Mr. Chas. L. Kahler, a prominent merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store.

They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by J. M. Rose.

WISE WORDS.

A lover's lies are the easiest to forgive.

Truth wears a garment of tents and patches. Genius is man's master; talent is his slave.

The mother in a woman makes her beautiful. Justice is blindfolded so she can't see the travesties on herself.

Men's tears affect by their quality: women by their quantity. Remedy your deficiencies and your merits will take care of themselves.

Stories to suit the public taste must be half epigrams and half pleasant vice. He that catches at more than belongs to him, justly deserves to lose what he has.

A man can always please a woman by letting her believe she knows more than he does.

The difference between an old fool and a young one is that the young one may outgrow it.

Faith is to believe what we do not see and the reward of faith is to see what we believe.

There they stand, the innumerable stars, shining in order like a living hymn, written in light.

Adversity is the trial of principle. Without it a man hardly knows whether he is honest or not.

Studies teach not their own use; that is a wisdom without them and above them, won by observation.

A woman may doubt a man's sincerity when he pays her a compliment, but she doesn't doubt the compliment.

While one finds company in himself and his pursuits, he cannot feel old, no matter what his years may be.

In addition to buying the cow and getting no cream, a man is expected to admire pictures and poetry concerning milkmaids. But you let him work, do it.

Have you noticed how baseless are the grievances of your friends? Your grievances have an equally ridiculous foundation to your friends. We all make too much of our troubles.

No one gets so old that he forgets what he did with the first money he earned himself. He will remember it longer than the circumstances under which he first kissed a girl.

Put Out in Just Ten Seconds. Our citizens to the number of two or three hundred gathered on the burnt district here, on last Monday afternoon at two o'clock, to witness the exhibition made by the Cincinnati Tin and Japan Fire Extinguisher Co. The test was given under the personal supervision of Mr. Herman B. Wells, president of the company, of Cincinnati, and Mr. W. V. Snyder, the local agent, of Georgetown, Ohio, and was satisfactory in every respect, clearly demonstrating the Stemple Extinguisher to be one of the best methods yet devised or invented for the control of fire.

A structure of pine boards was built, and after being thoroughly saturated with coal oil, a match was applied. The extinguisher was then turned on and the fire put out in about ten seconds. All who witnessed the test were thoroughly satisfied that the Stemple will do all and more than is claimed for it. The head-quarters of the company are at S. E. Cor. Sycamore and Canal Sts., Cincinnati—Winchester (Ohio) Herald.

How Shop Girls Eat. The way these girls set their little white sailor makes you like them, and the swing they walk with makes you know that they are in the "middle of the road" and are going to stay there.

They try to walk alone with them at ten o'clock, on dark Saturday night, but the girls walk the men into the police station. All the police are friends of the shop girls. You must not try to walk with any one of the 250 girls employed in the "New York Store" unless she wants you to, for a big police has one eye on those little girls, and, well, every good man here likes to help these girls.

For that reason some good man started the noon rest; a place where the girls go at noon, to rest and eat their dinner; they get a cup of coffee, slice of pie and a dish of baked beans for 15 cents. They have a light breakfast not much dinner, and a lighter supper, work all day with only a cup of coffee and a bun for dinner.

They cannot go home, car fare is too much, and they cannot bring a lunch, they have no time to prepare it, but they must go to the store at 1 o'clock and be as bright to the shop women, who are "just looking around" as if they had dined on porter-house steak, and at six they go home, too tired to cook supper, they eat out at a hotel, and wear a dress to wear next day, or as I have seen them set up with a sick baby all night, for I am sorry to say, a number of these girls live in a bad hole, and yet they make the living, getting from two to six dollars a week. When Sunday comes they have to clean their house and that day they get as good a meal as $4.00 a week will allow. It is no wonder that they look pale, and fever has its own way with them. They have stomach trouble, brought on by the way they eat, and they look as if they had never seen the pure air. I wish some rich man would bring a car load to Hazel Green for a month, and let them have a pot of beans and corn for a day, and the next morning appear, will those poor half fed girls know what the Lord has in store for them.

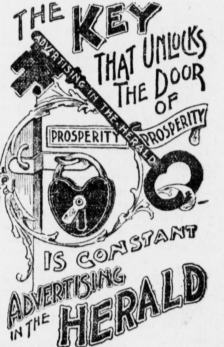

The first telegraphic message that ever passed over the wires was composed of the words "What hath God wrought."

CURRENT NEWS AND COMMENT.

No man knows the proper place for a Presidential veto better than Grover Cleveland.

There are preachers who are always puzzling their heads for something to preach about, who pass a saloon every time they go to church.

An English syndicate has practically arranged to purchase the 34 paper and pulp mills in Wisconsin for $14,000,000, half of which is to be paid in cash.

It is now said that the friends of Kolb, in Alabama, have abandoned their intention of contesting the governorship, and will run him for Congress in the Seventh district.

There has been a disastrous fire among the vessels anchored in the Canton river, near Hong Kong. Hundreds of flower-boats were consumed, and 1,000 natives who were aboard the vessels perished, either by fire or drowning.

The Woodford County Democratic Committee met at Versailles on August 30 and selected from its list of names furnished by friends of the three candidates thirty-six election officers to serve during the congressional primary Sept. 15.

Judge W. M. Beckner, Democratic candidate for the short term in Congress, is making an active canvass of the mountain portion of the district. The Hon. John Bosley, the Republican nominee, and Judge Beckner will probably make a joint canvass.

There is in Huntingdon, West Virginia, an old gentleman much opposed to dancing, whose only daughter is very fond of the sport. The girl attended a dance one night, and her father greeted her like this at the breakfast table next morning: "Good morning, child of the devil." She modestly replied: "Good morning, pa."

A Republican informed the editor of the Democrat a few days ago that at least fifty white Republicans of this county would vote for Beckner in preference to Bosley. As the white Republican vote of the county is only a few hundred, this per cent of defection, if it extends to the negroes, will give Beckner a thousand majority here.—Winchester Democrat.

The Republicans have nominated a preacher for Congress in this district, and in several counties have preachers on the local tickets. If they have nominated the parsons in order to get the good Lord on their side, the scheme will prove a failure. Their proper coat of arms would be a cloven hoof, a forked tail and a chunk of brimstone.—Winchester Democrat.

Heathen Moore thus sums up the situation when Breckinridge is nominated: "I will get three-fourths of the Owens Democrats, I will get half of the Prohibitionists, I will get all of the heathen except Rabbi Moses Kaufman, I will get a big slice of the colored troops, because I am against the Separate Coach Bill, and Billy Owens and Billy Breckinridge, and every durned bill of that kind. I will get a few preachers after the McGarvey stripe, and a slice off of the Campbellites because my grand daddy started their church, and I used to help to run it, and I will get every crank in the district, and then I will get a whole lot of decent people just because I am a decent man with a record as straight as a shingle, and slick as a ribbon; and if there is nobody on the track but my Cousin Willie and me I will get there Eli; and don't you forget it."

Gillmore Cleanings.
Old Granny Ely is some better. Willie Vest has something like flux. Rev. F. P. Wilson preached at this place Saturday and Sunday with two editions by baptism.

Rev. E. W. Minton's stable was burned on Monday about 2 p. m. Mysteriously caught fire by some means; no one knows how.

Old Mother Harper is yet alive, this being the 10th day since she was stricken. She knows every one, and has come to her speech, but has taken but little nourishment, and has no use of her left side.

At Cost.—Mrs. F. N. Day will close out her entire line of summer hats and trimmings at less than cost rather than carry them over, and now is your chance to buy bargains. Ladies' trimmed hats can now be had at from 50¢ to $1.50. Give her a call.

J. M. Havens, jeweler, has located in Hazel Green and has come to her speech, but has taken but little nourishment, and has no use of her left side. Bring your watches and fine jewelry to him for repairs. He is a first-class workman and guarantees his work at the most reasonable prices.

Lost.—The mail boy between this place and Campton, on Tuesday had an express package for us containing a large number of cuts, and by some means the box containing them was burst between here and Stillwater, in consequence of which some four pieces were lost. They are lead with copper face, and any one finding them will confer a favor by leaving them at this office.

An awkward man never does justice to himself, to his intelligence, to his intentions, or to his actual merit. A fine person, or a beautiful face in vain without the grace of deportment.—Churchill.

As objects close to the eye shut out larger objects on the horizon, so man sometimes covers up the entire disk of eternity with a dollar and quenches transcendent glories with a little dust.—E. H. Chapin.

The amelioration of the condition of mankind and the increase of human happiness ought to be leading objects of every political institution and the aim of every individual, according to the measure of his power in the position he occupies.—A. Hamilton.

MUSIC IN WALES.

Melody Is the Very Soul and Kernel of the Welsh Nature.

Every church and chapel in every Welsh village and town, according to the Westminster Review, has its choir, often numbering sixty, seventy or a hundred voices, and every choir has its musical prodigies, leaders of parts, mayhap, who have never had a lesson in music in their lives, or some uncouth colliers or tip-girls, with voices which, had they been trained and developed, might have made of them Edward Lloyds or Antoinette Sterlings. District after district has its "united choral union," which will take up the study of some work of the great masters and deliver it at an annual concert or Christmas festival; not in the pale, flickering, dispassionate style which is so characteristic of some English choirs, but with rugged fire and intensity.

I have had the good fortune to hear the greatest oratorios rendered under the most brilliant conditions that talent and culture could produce in this the most talented and cultured of all metropolises, but I have never heard the majestic roll of the Hallelujah chorus, or the matchless melodies of the "Elijah" rendered with such soul and verve and eloquence as by an obscure "united choir," led by a workman in a mining village among the hills of Glamorganshire.

Rough, if you will; ruggedly vehement and impetuous, but rough with the roughness of unpolished genius, impetuous with the impetuosity of mountain torrents. The force of it, the emotional fervor, the richness of volume, the tone and timbre in it—these are things not to be forgotten. The same qualities in a lesser degree may be observed in the singing of any small chapel choir inside the boundaries of Wales. You shall never hear such singing as you may hear on quiet Sunday evenings from some Welsh hillside sanctuary by a choir of working lads and lasses, conducted by some rough-and-ready, unkempt, self-taught musician.

Music, then, we assert, is the very soul and kernel of the Welsh nature. A musical ear is the national birth-right. Every Welsh preacher who migrates to an English church finds the greatest difficulty in abstaining from that weird, peculiar intonation of his sermon which is known as the hwy! and which is often strange and objectionable to English ears.

Another remarkable and subtle fact which will be interesting to English readers and at the same time significant of the sensitiveness of the Welsh musical ear, is that it is positive discord to many among the Welsh congregations if the new hymn, in "glorious" the first verse of the hymn does not so pitch the voice that it shall be in harmony with the key in which the tune has preliminarily been played by the instrumentalists.

SENATORIAL COURTESY.

How the Italian Ambassador Got Knew with the French Ambassador.

Before the introduction of the telegraph ambassador at foreign courts used to be far more important personages than they now are, and great rival grandeur existed among them. On one occasion, says Cassell's Sunday Journal, a new Italian minister had arrived at the Spanish capital, and went en suite to pay his respects to the reigning sovereign. Arriving at one of the reception rooms to the palace, he found it occupied by an imposing-looking man surrounded by a glittering throng. These he not unnaturally took to be the king and his courtiers, and with profound obeisance introduced himself.

The supposed king received him with gracious condescension, the doors opened and an even more magnificent train ushered in the real king and showed to the discomfited Italian that he had been kneeling before his hated rival, the French ambassador, who took no pains to conceal his satisfaction at the flattering mistake. But his triumph was not to last, for in the evening of the same day the king, with the Italian as his partner, was playing cards against the French minister and a third ambassador, when in the course of the game the Italian threw down a card, exclaiming: "That is the king and it wins us the trick." His partner looked at it and said: "No! You only played the knave." "O! I beg your majesty's pardon, so I have!" and with a quick glance at his French opponent he continued: "and it is the second time to-day that I have mistaken a knave for a king!"

Somewhat Severe.

An exchange prints a story which may be recommended to the attention of all public speakers who have the dangerous gift of fluency. A young lawyer talked for several hours to a jury in Indiana, to the weariness of all who were obliged to listen. At last he sat down and the opposing counsel, a white-haired veteran, rose to reply. "Your honor," said he, "I will follow the example of my young friend, and has just finished, and submit the case without argument." With that he took his seat and the silence was oppressive.

THE red brick Dutch tiled two-story building which was erected at one end of the Massachusetts building at the world's fair, for the express purpose of advertising a certain brand of cocoa, has been sold to a Bostonian for $600. It cost $30,000, and was originally put together in Holland.

ORIGIN OF COMMON THINGS.

Historical Hints You Should Keep in Your Head.

Steel pens originated in England in 1803.

Lawyers were known in Babylon 2300 B. C.

Tiles were used on houses in Rome 500 B. C.

Book-keeping is first mentioned in Italy about 1669.

Cock-fighting was introduced into England in 1191.

Titles are older than written history. King is the oldest.

Painting in both oil and water colors was known in Egypt 1900 B. C.

Shoes are first mentioned in Egyptian annals 2000 years before Christ.

Stamps for marking goods were in use at Rome before the Christian era.

Chess was of military origin and known in India before the Christian era.

Ink is mentioned in the Egyptian inscriptions about the time of the Exodus.

The use of the Christian era in chronology began in Italy in 525. It was not employed in England until 816.

Banks were first established in Lombardy by the Jewish money lenders. The first public bank was that of Venice, in 1500.

Notaries are first mentioned in the fourth century. They were appointed by priests and bishops to keep the church records.

India rubber used for erasing pencil marks was known in England as early as 1770. A cube of it half an inch square cost three shillings.

The first mills were made for the use of doctors to keep their fingers soft and warm, that they might accurately feel the pulse of their patients.

Astronomy was highly developed in Assyria B. C. 2334. The Book of Job, written about B. C. 1520, mentions several constellations.

The original stethoscope was a roll of paper in the hands of the surgeon Laennec in 1816, but over 150 years earlier the principle had been explained.

The cravat was originally a large shawl worn around the neck, not for show, but for comfort, by a nation of Eastern Europe called the Cravates, or Croates.

The thistle, shamrock and rose are the emblems of Scotland, Ireland and England, probably because of the prevalence of those plants in those countries.

The word bumper, signifying a drink or pledge, was originally a toast to the Pope in Roman Catholic countries, drunk in a full glass just after dinner at Bon Pere.

The cross mark instead of a signature did not originate in ignorance. It was always appended to signatures in medieval times as an attestation of good faith.

Tarring and feathering was once a legal punishment for thieves. It is said to be found in the statutes of both England and France about the time of the Crusades.

Boo, the exclamation used to frighten children, is a corruption of Boh, the name of a famous Gothic General. It has been used as a terror word for many centuries.

Signals used by ships at sea date from 1665. They were invented by the Duke of York, afterwards James II, and so far as known, were the only things he ever did invent.

Clocks are said by some to have been invented by Pyædicus, a priest of Verona, in the ninth century. By others, the invention is credited to Boethius, in the sixth century.

The administration of the oath to witnesses is a practice of very high antiquity. It is mentioned as of common use among the Jews at the time of the Exodus from Egypt.

The father of the piano was the spinet chord, and its grandfather the harpsichord. The piano was first used in a public concert on May 16, 1767, in the Covent Garden Theatre, London.

The first silk dress worn in Europe was sported by a lady of the French court in 1455. The first pair of silk stockings worn in Europe adorned the ankles of Henry II. of France in 1500.

Pledging a toast originated among the Saxons. As the drinker raised the heavy cup with both hands a friend would stand by him with a drawn sword to prevent him from being poisoned.

The design of the American flag was probably borrowed from the family arms of Gen. Washington, which consisted of three stars in the upper portion and three bars across the section.

Watches originated at Nuremberg as early as 1477. They were at first called Nuremberg eggs, which they resembled both in shape and size. They were often fitted into the tops of walking-sticks.

Guns are said to have been used by the Chinese before the beginning of the Christian era. The oldest dated piece of European artillery bears an inscription declaring that the gun was cast in 1503.

The first English book on stenography, so far as known, was written by Dr. Timothy Bright in 1588. Its earlier invention is attributed to the Latin poet Ennius, to Seneca, Cicero and several others.

Marine insurance was practiced in Rome B. C. 45. It was very general in Europe before the discovery of America, and it is altogether probable that the ships of Columbus were insured for their full value.

The Hungarian of three centuries ago was entitled to wear one feather in his cap for every Turk he killed, hence the phrase in common use among us.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, foot ball players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale by J. M. Rose.

PEARCE AMERSON'S WILL BY RICHARD MALCOLM JOHNSTON.

"Of course, Mr. Amerson, you understand my parish, which I'm simple an officer of the court, and isn't supposed to know anything about the merits of the case."

"Certainly I do, Mr. Ennis, and you've been sheriff long enough to know that often where there's a great cry for a little bit of wool, as I've heard you've heard the expression, I've always respected you, Mr. Ennis, as a man and as a sheriff, not to say anything as a friend. Occasionally, I wouldn't undertake to say how often it's been my pleasure to help you in your election and other times and things, in trifling little ways, we won't say how, it not being worth while. I hope that next time you won't be ruled on you so hard. But if they do, I've no doubt you'll know who are your friends, and that they'll continue to stand up to you. Good morning."

Yes, he made a point always to have the sheriff on good terms with him. In the case of this one, who in his too yielding indulgence to defendants in execution had several times been ruled for not having the money in court, Amerson had come to his rescue.

"Yes," soliloquized the official after he had turned away, "you has help me sometimes when you needed your own danger, although, which you don't believe I know, you voted ag'in me when I first got in, and you'd a done it again last time, exceptin' you see I had the field. Very long, Mr. Amerson. You've been dodgin' and bamboozlin' the hounds so far. Go 'long."

Amerson repaired straightway to Watson's office, a large room opposite Rainer's store, to which steps led from the street. The lawyer noted at once his perturbation and the slowness of his relief from assurance that nothing was to be apprehended from the action for words unless proof was made of their utterance within the last six months. With some coldness he said:

"Mr. Amerson, I hope that the words charged in this writ were not spoken by you at any time. I've taken your case believing that your hands had been—well, I'll say, moderately clean, with intent to see that you got all of your legal rights, not my business to inquire how your father came to make such a will, against which I find there's a good deal of feeling in the county, and there's no sort of doubt that it is obliged to be sustained if your recollection of the facts as you've told them to me is entirely accurate. The fight against you is going to be serious, the case of Mr. Amerson is of counsel in the case, he's a man of very great capacity, and who, at least in attack, is not one to waste his powder unless he believes that something is to be gained by it. You've said to me that you wouldn't be opposed to a compromise that might not be too unfair. Let me tell you what I've been turning over in my mind. Your wife's death, and so is Mrs. Amerson's husband. Why not let the whole dispute be settled by your marrying her and adopting her son? Such things are done very often. You're both young, and for her, why, she's a beauty, whom any man might take and give love. How would that suit? Who knows but that that's what she's driving at in this case? Mrs. Amerson can't do better. You're old enough to understand that women have more than one string to their bows."

The client's eyes gleamed under the utterance of these words, then in a low, eager voice he answered:

"Mr. Watson, if you could arrange that, I'd double the fee I've promised, and, if it's necessary, I'd double that Mr. Dabney is expecting to get."

Smiling, the lawyer replied:

"I don't think, if I were in your place, that I'd make such an offer to Dabney. Indeed, wouldn't care to do it myself. Dabney is rather a ticklish sort of fellow about taking fees, as it were, over the left shoulder. Then, some people say he wants the widow himself."

Noticing the pallor on Amerson's face, he continued:

"But, if you wish, I'll feel of him, and there's no doubt that he will not try to hinder Mrs. Amerson's acceptance of your proposal, whether she may incline to it or not. At all events it won't do any harm to make it. On reflection, it may do you some good, even if it's rejected, provided it becomes generally known. You see, it will be the amplest apology and compensation you can make for any words they may prove you to have said against her. You seem to be in earnest about it."

Looking down for a moment, Amerson took from his pocket a handkerchief and wiped his eyes. Then he said:

"Mr. Watson, I'm going to tell you something. I've loved Hannah ever since she was a girl, and I've never loved anybody like I've loved her. I can't ask me why I didn't marry her, I could at least as I thought I could have done. She had nothing but herself, and I—well, I was ambitious to get rich, and the more I've got the more I've been disappointed. My wife that's dead saw how it was, but she was a good woman, and not healthy, and after Cullen died she said on her death-bed that she hoped I and Hannah would marry. I told Hannah that six months ago, and offered to settle on her a good part of father's property, but she as good as ordered me out of her house. It's impossible, but I've got to that, Mr. Watson, I'd be willing to give up my rights, the whole of that property if I could get her."

His voice and lips trembled with the excess of his passion and its hopelessness. After a moment's pause he said, that is, for strength, a not count in my resolution, which mayn't be quite up to what it used to be. Well, after I get through with my lawsuit, I'll persevere over and see what the business is."

Watson was pleased at his readiness to undertake the delicate mission, backed by terms which Mr. Flint would not say were fair; that was not the word.

"No, Squire Watson, I should name 'em lib'l, high lib'l. To give Hannah a fourt, and her child a fourt, him to pay lawyer fee and court on both sides, and settle on Hannah five thousand dollars of his own property, is terms which if they ain't lib'l I don't know what is lib'l; but it only go to show, that the field is very long, Mr. Amerson."

"I hope that's it, Mr. Watson; and you know my terms—that is, we can figure on it, and see what you think is the best way to put it."

After some pause, Watson said:

"Mr. Amerson, on reflection, I believe I'd rather not make to Dabney a proposal of that kind, and I'm sure, it wouldn't be the very best for you to do it. Why not make it directly to the widow, either by yourself or through some friend? Isn't there some one who is friendly to all parties whom you could trust with it?"

"I wouldn't like, myself, to go to Mr. Dabney about it, or for you either, because, from what you say, he'd be against me. The old man, Flint, is a friend of Hannah, and he used to be a good friend to me. Once or twice he's told me I ought to compromise the case somehow, because he knows they can't break the will, which he signed as a witness, and he tells everybody that mentions it to him that he never saw father in stronger mind than he was on argumentation. I don't know, but I think he might advise Hannah to take my proposition."

"The very man! The very man! Among other reasons for that is that he is friendly to all parties, and he can circulate it, and that will take off some of the prejudice against you. Will you see him?"

"I'd rather it would be you, Mr. Watson. The old man would take it as a compliment if you was to send for him, and you'd know better than me how to talk to him, and, besides, it'll bolster him up more on his side when he's told, in the way you know how, that I want to be reasonable."

"All right. Do you get somebody to tell him I want to see him."

After an understanding as to the precise terms in which to put the proposition, Amerson left the office. As he stepped upon the sidewalk, Hannah, leaning her son, was passing. Glancing momentarily at him, she immediately turned her face away, and proceeded on. He stood gazing at her as she went. When he entered one of the stores, he sighed, and, turning, walked rapidly in the direction opposite. In that moment the wish to possess her grew greater than that of prevailing in the lawsuit.

CHAPTER XVII.

The next day following was one of what Mr. Flint used to style his Saturdays for going to town. After his incident toddy and usual chat with Rachel, he repaired to Rainer's, and, taking one of the split-bottomed chairs which stood always within for the accommodation of customers, removed it to the sidewalk, seated himself and began upon one of his biscuits.

"Oh, Uncle Lishy," said Mr. Rainer, "I forgot at the minute of howling with you to tell you that Capt. Watson was in here yesterday, and he asked me, if he didn't happen to see you himself, to tell you he'd be much obliged if you'd stop in his office, as he wanted to have a little talk with you about some business, he didn't say what."

Pausing at the bite he was in the act of taking, he said:

"Why, what you say, Jeems, he didn't name the business he wanted with me?"

"Didn't even hint what it was."

"Myself these lawyers! Why, Arthur Dabney he send words to me some times he want to see me, and now here 'tis Squire Watson he's a-sendin' his words. Look like they think some thing of Lishy on his opinion, if he is old and a mighty nigh wore out."

"Ah, Uncle Lishy, you're not so old that people don't appreciate your judgment; and I hope it will be many a year before you'll be 't'."

"Thanky, Jeems, thanky. If I don't oversize my own judgment, such as the good Lord give me, seem to me like she's jes' the same she's always been, that is, for strength, a not count in my resolution, which mayn't be quite up to what it used to be. Well, after I get through with my lawsuit, I'll persevere over and see what the business is."

ANTS IN FLORIDA.

More of Them Than There in Any Other Part of the World.

There are more ants in the square mile in Florida than in any other country in the world, says a writer in the Savannah News. There are ants which will measure more than half an inch in length, and then there are ants so small that they can scarcely be seen to move with the unaided eye. There are red ants and black ants, and troublesome ants. But as bad as they are, I have never heard of them eating out the seat of a man's trousers, as a missionary, Rev. Mr. Wilson, once told the writer he saw the army ants do in India while the man was sitting on the earth for a few minutes beside him.

But the Florida ants will take out the lettuce and other minute seeds from the soil in which they are planted and actually destroy the bed. They will suck the life out of acres of young cucumbers and melon plants, uproot strawberry plants or cover the buds with earth to such an extent as to kill them. They will get into pie, pickle, sauce, sirup, sugar, on meat, in hash, will riddle a cake or fill a loaf of baker's bread till it is worthless. All remedies failing, I took to baiting them, near their nests with slices of meat, honey, apples and pears, and when I had from fifty to one hundred thousand out turned a kettle of boiling-water on them. I have killed in one week over one million in the space of a quarter acre lot, and I have almost wiped them out. I had to do this to secure any lettuce plants, and many unobservant farmers complain of seedlings when they should attribute their troubles to insects.

It is very curious and instructive to see how promptly the ants which escape the scalding will go to work taking out the dead, and after piling them outside first, then go to excavating again and rebuilding their cells and runways. This being done very quickly the next work on hand is the laying in of a supply of food, by hauling the dead bodies of the hot-water victims into their storehouses. You may see a small black ant hauling and tugging at the carcass of a red ant twenty times its own weight, and he always succeeds, in the end, in landing it in the warehouse of the colony. Next you may see a sort of ambulance corps searching for the disabled. They are taken carefully to the underground, where the surgeons and nurses are in waiting. Then, too, you may see the timekeepers and bosses directing this one, or turning another back on some errand or to some other duty. There is not a moment's delay, no halting feet, no idle hands, but all move as if it was their last day on earth, and this was the only way in which to redeem a misspent life. For lessons in industry and perfect government go to the ants.

EUROPEAN MONASTICISM.

Said to Have Begun on the Little Island of St. Honorat.

To the student of ecclesiastical history the little island of St. Honorat is one of the most unimpressive spots in Europe, says the Thürmer. Almost invisible on the map, it at one time occupied a most conspicuous position in the eyes of the world as one of its great historical and religious centers. Intellectual and moral influence it had, as Montalembert truly says, a greater effect upon the progress of humanity than any famous isle of the Grecian archipelago. It may well be called the fons of the south. It is a remarkable circumstance that two little insignificant islands, one in the far north, amid the dark clouds and mists of the wild Arctic, and the other in the far south, under the brilliant blue sky, and laved by the blue waters of the Mediterranean, should have formed the centers which drew to them, and from whence were dispensed, all the spiritual and intellectual forces of Christendom during its darkest ages.

Meeting one day one of those wretched lepers, who were common in Europe in the early Christian centuries as they are now in Asia, Honorat took him home to his own room and began to anoint his terrible sores. Suddenly the dreadful mask of deformity fell off, and the seared face burst out into overpowering radiance; and in the transfigured leper he beheld with inexpressible awe no other than the Lord Jesus Himself.

When St. Honorat left his northern home he was accompanied by his sister, who was devotedly attached to him. The strict rules of monastic life would not allow the presence of a woman within the precincts. The gentle and beautiful girl, who at her baptism as a Christian received the name of Margaret, was consequently sent to reside in the neighboring island of Lero, where she was completely separated from her brother. By her entreaties she at last prevailed upon him to promise to come and see her once a year. "Let me know," said she, "at what time I may look for your coming, for that season will be to me the only season of the year." The saint replied that he would come when the almond trees were in blossom. Whereupon the legend says the forsaken Margaret assailed all the saints with her prayers and tears, and she got her wish, that the almond trees in her island should miraculously blossom once a month; and sending each month a branch with the significant flowers on it to her brother's retreat, he dutifully came to her at once, and her heart was thus made glad by the sight of her brother no less than twelve times every year.

ACADEMY NOTES.

Mr. C. E. French, of Stanton, will have classes of some classes in the Academy this year.

About two hundred volumes have been added to the Academy Library, which will now be kept at the Home.

Lloyd Jones, of Hedges, Clark Co., came in Monday and was at the Academy Home, ready to begin his school work.

Mrs. Sue M. Ireland was called to Oklahoma Territory, on August 24th to the bed side of her daughter, Mrs. Sallie Neal, who was dangerously sick. Mrs. Neal taught in the Academy two years ago.

The Kentucky Board of C. W. B. M. has recommended the National Board of C. W. B. M. to add two recitation rooms to the Academy. The rooms will be quite an addition to the building, and will afford ample room for all pupils.

The Board of our Academy will employ two additional teachers to assist in the school this session. They are negotiating with Miss L. Etta Kannels, of Wilmington, Ohio, to succeed Mr. J. H. Swango, and Miss M. Alice Smith, of Boone, Iowa, to succeed Miss Nettie Robertson.

Scrofula Cured—Blood Purified by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: It is a pleasure that I send a testimonial concerning what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for my daughter. It is a wonderful medicine and I cannot recommend it too highly. Sarah, who is fourteen years of age, has been afflicted with Scrofula ever since she was one year old. For five years she has had a running sore on one side of her face. We tried every remedy known, but nothing did her any good until we commenced using Hood's Sarsaparilla. My married daughter advised me to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I began to use it and she was cured in about a year, and it has conquered the running sore, and it has cured her of dyspepsia. She had been troubled with that complaint since childhood, and since her cure she has never been without a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the house. We are all well and happy. Write to me, I will send you the best." MRS. M. A. GRIFFIN, Xenia, Illinois.

Lexington Business

COLLEGE.

THE PRACTICAL School of the South.

ENDORSED by the highest County and State officials, by the leading business and professional men of the country, and by hundreds of pupils who are successful in business.

A REVELATION is made to the pupil in Book-keeping, Banking, Short-hand, Type-writing, Telegraphy, Penmanship, Commercial Law, Arithmetic, Grammar, Spelling and Business Correspondence as taught by one very and interesting plan of ACTUAL BUSINESS PRACTICE used only in this College, before which the old theoretical, copyrighted, text-book, copying system must go.

POSITIONS for its pupils are made a specialty in this school, which promises to the Commercial World the highest type of efficient business men and women.

GUARANTEED to be as represented or money refunded.

BEWARE of schools which do not do this. Send for beautiful illustrated Catalogue, free.
